Hagerstown Man Beaten and Robbed
HAGERSTOWN, Md., July 20.—J. C. Anderson, an eccentric aged shoemaker, reports to the police that he was robbed of $18. Some time between 2 and 4 o'clock yesterday morning he was struck on the head while asleep in a small room in the rear of his shop on North Jonathan street. Anderson thinks he was chloroformed after he was struck, and while he was unconscious he was robbed. He regained his senses about 4 o'clock and found his head in a pool of blood with a two-inch gash on the side of his head. A chisel, which the robber had probably used on his head, was lying near.

Demented Man Tried to Kill Niece.
HAGERSTOWN, Md., July 20.—Miss Hilda Alexander, aged sixteen years, daughter of Frank Alexander, residing near Brownsville, Washington county, was seized while walking on the secondstory porch at her home by her demented greatniece, George Bingham, aged seventy years, and hurled to the ground, a distance of twenty feet. The girl's collar bone and several ribs were broken and it is believed she also sustained internal injuries. Her condition is regarded as precarious. Bingham's mind has been unbalanced for some time, although he never, prior to yesterday, displayed a vicious temper. He made his home with the girl's parents. He will probably be placed in an insane asylum.

Directions for Making Iced Tea.—Warm the water, put in a heaping teaspoonful of "Salsola" Tea for every two cups. Pour on freshly boiled water and allow to infuse from 6 to 8 minutes. Pour the liquor off the leaves and let cool. "Salsola" Tea is a most delicious and refreshing beverage. A small piece of lemon will add to its flavor.

WOMEN KEATERS

SHANTUNG FROCK.

A pretty little frock in gobelin blue shantung, with trimmings of cotton lace, is sketched here. Wide bands of the lace border the center panel of the princess front, running from above the curve of the bust to the heading of the pleated flounce. This lace on one edge is finished by narrow ball trimming, which continues over the shoulder, and also outlines the little square neck. Crochet buttons and frogs trim the center panel, and a row of the buttons the plain, close-fitting sleeve. The hat worn with this pretty frock was blue crim, with trimming of black net and novelty feather in black.

FROCKS FOR ELDERLY WOMEN'S EVENING WEAR

Separate Waists and Skirts Are Effective Combinations for the Stout Middle-Aged Matron.

While the one piece dress is the most popular model, some middle-aged women cling to the separate skirt and waist style, declaring it to be more convenient and economical for persons of their age. This, it must be admitted, is often true, especially when preparing an informal evening toilet. For, with a skirt of substantial material in a good quality and a smart waist the combination has more dignity than the gown of one material, which of necessity must be light in texture, if the bodice is to be cool and comfortable. Girls and young matrons may indulge in simple frocks of inexpensive material for evening and look charming, but an elderly woman so dressed will probably give the impression of trying to ape juvenile fashions.

While a short or a stout person will find that a skirt and waist that match in color is a more becoming than the two garments in separate shades, a tall or a slight woman may wear waist and skirt in different colors successfully, however, will be more up to date.

The best tones for the separate skirt when it must be worn with a waist of contrasting color are black, white and gray.

Suitable materials are chiffon broadcloth, bengaline, the crepe goods, poplin, fine serge and cashmere.

Fabrics suitable for evening waists are net, lace, lingerie, dotted-swiss, marquisette, China silk and crepe, the selection depending entirely upon the needs of the waist.

For home use dotted-swiss made simply with a little tucking to form a yoke makes an ideal waist for warm evenings. The neck should be cut square and finished with a strip of insertion lace edged with a little lace trim. The three-quarter sleeves should be similarly trimmed. This model will suit the plump type of woman. Those of more slender build will probably find the small transparent yoke more becoming.

Thin arms, too, might be covered with soft lace that falls over the hands. The waist may be white or black, as the wearer pleases. It is a fabric that launders easily. Lingerie waists are correct for home evening wear, but the skirt should not be of the average wash goods. A pretty skirt of handkerchief linen daintily embroidered will be cool, but nothing stiff or sleeves following the waist effect. For informal evening wear on warm nights nothing is cooler than the net waist. But being on the blouse order, an elaborate model must be avoided. Black or white net made with tucks and a little insertion lace running from shoulder to belt, is a generally becoming style, the sleeves following the waist effect.

There should be a transparency about the face, the neck high or cut slightly low as considered becoming to the wearer. This kind of blouse will look smarter if confined to black only. A relief of white is unnecessary and will not be an improvement. A jet collar and belt will add importance to the toilet and may be used with good effect in the case of a black waist. A simple waist of white crepe is another choice for evening. This material looks its best made plain, the front embroidered and the neck finished with a collar and small yoke of jagging. This combination washes quickly and needs no ironing, just a thorough shaking when dry.

The thin silks, such as messaline and the washable kinds, make into pretty cool waists simply trimmed with tucking or a little lace val. The fabrics made into groups of fine tucks before cutting are always effective, adding a small yoke of lace or embroidered net.

The yoke may be white embroidered to match the waist in color. Crepe waists are striking when worked with a dainty color. Mercerized thread, however, and not silk, should be used for this purpose.

When used for some hours it will effectively prevent blackness, but it is practically no good if put on only for an hour or more. If an accident happens late in the afternoon the compresses should be renewed through the night—for instance, every fifteen minutes.

Hints for Women.
Surely never was there such a variety of long loose coat models for seaside, country and mountain wear as is seen this season. The prices, too, are so modest, and if one is wise in making the choice these wraps may be worn in the fall to and from business (before the autumn suit is needed) or for general outing and shopping.

The navy blues, tans and browns are most attractive, while every one knows what a good investment is the purchase of a mixed tweed wrap. The prices are all the way from $4 upward.

Draped overskirts and fastened sashes seem to be returning to favor again. Evening wear draped skirts are almost exclusively shown. Of course, for day and general use the fashion is not as adaptable, but scarfs and ribbon sashes are added to give the new effects even on lingerie frocks. Sometimes a sash is brought around the waist to the front and then knotted at the left side or in the back. Only a tall slender girl could stand such a decoration, and an artistic arrangement is necessary to succeed even when the figure is slender.

Lace shoes seem going out of style. Large sailor hats are abundant. Men's neckwear is narrowing.

CREW STUCK TO THEIR SHIP.

Lashed Themselves in Rigger.

Could Easily Have Got Ashore.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 20.—Capt. John Coleman, a seventy-year-old mariner, and his crew of four men were taken from the schooner Madagascar yesterday by a wrecking boat that came from New York, after they had remained lashed to the rigging and in imminent peril for two nights.

The Madagascar, hails from Calais, Me., and is owned by H. F. Eaton & Son. She was on her way back to Calais with a cargo of coal when Joseph Slack of Brooklyn, who was steering, at a point off Cow's reef held her a trifle too long on the starboard tack.

Her bow went under the reef, water poured through a hole, and the loss of the boat appeared certain. The crew had boats, but they decided to stay on the vessel, but the men still stuck to the ship.

After sending word to their owners the men tied themselves in the rigging and settled back for two nights of waiting. Sunday night there came squalls and a storm that threatened to break up the vessel, but the men still stuck to the ship.

FATIMA WAS A JOY RIDER.

Hen Escaped Death, Flew Upon Auto's Hood and Laid an Egg.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Martin Hess, a hotelkeeper of Cranford, has a hen which he has trained to come into his kitchen to lay eggs. When a sherry flip is wanted Fatima, as Hess calls her, if properly disposed, lays the egg on the bar.

Robert L. Eaton, clerk of the Union county grand jury, was going through Cranford in an automobile at a forty-mile clip. Fatima got in the way and had to fly to the hood of the machine to save her life.

Probably to show her joy over her narrow escape, Eaton says, the hen laid an egg right then and there. Eaton rode into Elizabeth with the story and the egg as proof of its truth.

Sows on Severed Fingers.

BALTIMORE, July 20.—An operation that may prove beneficial to John S. Schminke, the baker whose index and second fingers on his right hand were cut off in a mixing machine at a bakery, 408 Park avenue, last Sunday night, was performed yesterday at the Maryland General Hospital by Dr. C. L. Beaver.

Dr. Beaver sewed the stumps of the fingers to the hand and believes they will unite again. It was late in the night when the man was taken to the hospital, and the doctor asked for the severed fingers. He was told they were at the scene of the accident, and he sent a man after them. When he returned with them the doctor sewed the muscles and the skin together, a ter washing the stumps in a salt solution. The hand of the man is now being kept warm to promote circulation.

New Waterway Nearly Done.

BEAUFORT, N. C., July 20.—Nearly five miles of the inland waterway from Beaufort to the Neuse river, designed to avoid the dangers of navigation off Cape Hatteras, have just been completed. The dredging boat is now located in a creek, where much difficulty is being encountered. When the canal, with its ten-foot channel, is finished, it is believed that not only will it offer better protection to life and cargoes in the coast commerce, but that it will result in an important saving in time and expense.

WOULD PROTECT SETTLER.

Land Commissioner Dennett Speaks of Reservation Opening.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 20.—In speaking of the opening of the Spokane, Coeur d'Alene and Flathead Indian reservations, after the drawing which will be held next month, Fred Dennett, a commissioner of the general land office at Washington, D. C., said last night:

"The policy of the government is to protect the bona fide settler so far as possible and to prevent the speculation from acquiring title to government lands without proper compliance to the law. The interests of any community are injured by the acquisition of land by persons who do not intend to live thereon. The settler loses a neighbor who would otherwise aid him in building roads and in the establishment of schools, streets and the merchant loses a customer, who under all rights should be on the land, putting it to its best purpose."
